CARRANZA'S MINISTER OF WAR DEPARTS FOR JUAREZ TO CONFER WITH U. S. CHIEF OF STAFF.

LOOK FOR ADJUSTMENT

Upon Outcome of Conference Will Depend Future Policy With Reference to Expeditionary Force in Mexico.

El Paso, April 25.—General Obregon, minister of war of the de facto government, departed from San Luis Potosi today for Juarez for his conference with Major General Hugh L. Scott of the United States army on the military questions that are now pending between the United States and Mexico. A dispatch was received today by General Gaviro, commander of Juarez, from General Obregon, which stated that he had started on his journey and hoped to see him soon.

Interest in Conference.

Washington, April 25.—Official attention today was focused on the conference regarding the Mexican situation to be held within the next few days, probably at Juarez, between Major General Scott, chief of staff of the United States army, and General Obregon, minister of war of the de facto government of Mexico. The number of men in the expedition was not disclosed, although the Russian contingent was described as "a strong force." It was intimated in dispatches from Marseilles that possibly a quarter of a million men would be sent this spring from Russia to France, as Russia has more men under training than she can use herself, and it is easier to equip them in France than in Russia.

The Russians were received with all military honors and debarked amid enthusiastic cheers.

Giving Housing Welcome.

The contingent arrived at ten this morning, its coming being greeted by flying flags and blowing whistles from the craft of many nations in the harbor, and by a large crowd massed on the quay which was especially prepared for arrival of the troops, all merchandise having been removed. A regiment of Russians provided a military guard.

General Miniere, the governor of Marseilles, accompanied by his staff, welcomed the commander of Russian forces. The Russian troops assembled on the docks, replying to greetings from the shore and harbors with hearty cheers. The debarkation was immediately begun, the crowd continually manifesting its enthusiasm.

FACTORY SAFETY MEET WEDNESDAY FOR ALL WORKERS

Movie Show at Myers Theater Tomorrow Evening for Janesville Factory Employees.

Under the auspices of the Janesville Commercial Club and the Wisconsin Industrial Commission at the Myers theater tomorrow evening will show in Janesville its moving picture films for the promotion of greater safety and carelessness necessary both on the part of employee and employer in the conservation of life and limb.

In addition to the films to be shown there is to be a special lecture along the same lines as depicted by the films.

Secretary Peter V. Kuhn of the Commercial Club yesterday distributed eleven hundred tickets of admission to stores and factories of the city.

These were given to department foremen to further the education among employees. A large gathering is looked for tomorrow evening at the theater and workers, no matter how casual or more hazardous employed, will obtain a valuable lesson by attending.

In the fall of 1914 the Industrial Commission made arrangements to carry out the idea of utilizing moving pictures in its educational campaign for safety in places of employment.

The motion picture at once entertains and instructs. It speaks a universal language and is understood by all.

It is not well known that the English language to "catch the drift" of the safety pamphlet given to him, the safety-movie does for him what the pamphlet could never do.

The commission detailed one of its deputies to collect a set of safety films and stereopticon slides. These slides were carefully selected and trial pictures were arranged to get everything in running order.

From time to time new slides were added until the completed list now includes a fair showing of the more important subjects of the commission.

The subject of child labor is made plain through various slides which show bad conditions of the child worker in other states. These are followed by groups of Wisconsin boys and girls, working under normal conditions.

The instruction received in continuation school classes. Free employment opportunities are the subject of several slides. What happens when a boiler "lets go" is vividly depicted in a series of slides showing great destruction of life and property.

About forty slides are given over to the home-made mechanical safeguard, while twenty pictures teach care in preserving the eyes by the use of goggles. Blood-poisoning cases showing the results of neglecting immediate first aid treatment of minor injuries make a deep and lasting impression upon the worker.

Interesting slides show accident victims and the effect of injuries on the future of a wage earner and his family.

Two of the moving pictures need depict the dangers of everyday factory life. A pretty romance is woven into the stories, making the picture entertaining as well as instructive.

Another picture shows the dangers of the street in which auto team and street car mixups follow each other in rapid succession. It teaches boys to be careful in this age of motor traffic as a safety lesson for the general public, this picture has great value.

As the various slides and movies are shown on the screen a lecture is given by the party in charge. The lecturer is at his best he amuses his audience with flashes of timely humor.

At the beginning these safety shows were given to schools. They had a most wholesome effect on the work of accident reduction, as acknowledged by a large number of presenters in Wisconsin.

To present this program to the workers at a minimum expense remained the only problem. The Industrial Commission had no funds available for the rental of halls so this small burden was placed upon the manufacturers in every city visited.

Also, seeing the economic value of an effective safety lesson to the men in their employ, the manufacturers were more than willing to pay the hall rent and the cost of printing admission tickets and advertising posters. Each workman was given a ticket of admission through his foreman or superintendent.

At almost every show the "S. M. sign" was displayed. In many cities the factory owners acted as ushers, ticket takers or were otherwise helpful in promoting the safety shows.

In larger cities, two or three evenings were given over to these shows, with matinees for the night workers. At these matinees, the general public and the high school manual training classes were admitted. The response was general.

Approximately 58,000 workmen attended the moving picture safety shows during the winter 1914-1915 and the endorsements from workers and their employers were beyond all expectation. The most flattering newspaper comments were recorded.

Many cities have not been visited through inability to secure the proper hall in a given time, but during next winter's campaign these places will be included in the itinerary. Many of the towns already visited have applied for return dates.

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE

To the Editor of The Gazette:

We hear so much about furnishing a park where people can go and spend a quiet Sunday. Our streets are teeming all day Sunday with children, screaming, playing tag and roller skating and every conceivable thing that can disturb those who would like to have a quiet day.

Sunday was given us by an Almighty being as a day of rest. Surely no one can rest mind or body in this terrible din. While so much is being done for the betterment of the people this Lenten season let us not forget those whose whole lives are one long roar. Give them at least one day of rest from this disgusting confusion and noise. Teach the children that others have rights as well as they, and we will have better men and women in the years to come.

BOARDERS DISMISSED WHEN WIFE ELOPES

Boarding House Keeper Said to Have Left Town With "Star Boarder."

Mr. and Mrs. William Foss conducted a boarding house, or at least they did until last Saturday, on North Madison street. Among the boarders was Thomas Dabney, a harness maker, who was a conspicuous patron of the Foss dining table.

On Saturday last, it is alleged, that Mrs. Foss and Dabney took an unknown train together, or at least they disappeared at the same time, and no trace of either has been found since that date.

A railroad employee has reported to the authorities, showing all the descriptions of Mrs. Foss and Dabney were on the early morning train to Chicago.

Mr. Foss disappeared, taking with him a suitcase, savings account. His wife began a search and after appealing to the police, placed the matter in the hands of an attorney. The lawyer was successful in locating Foss at Des Moines, Iowa.

He returned to Janesville to his home. Foss and his wife, probably because a desertion warrant was threatened by Mrs. Foss. The trouble was smoothed over and domestic peace reigned supreme at the Foss residence until the star boarder brought calamity last Saturday.

Mr. and Mrs. Foss were married about two years ago. She had been married twice before. She had been willing to risk the trials of matrimony for the third time. She is younger than Mr. Foss, he being over sixty years of age.

On or about last Saturday Mrs. Foss collected the money due from the boarders in advance. She needed the money, she told them. When Sunday morning came there was no one at the breakfast table.

The chairs previously had been occupied by the woman and Dabney, who at the time she left, placed the matter in the hands of an attorney. The lawyer was successful in locating Foss at Des Moines, Iowa.

This morning the sign "boarders taken" has been taken down from the Foss residence.

TOWNSEND TRACTOR TO EVANSVILLE FARM

Tractor Engine and Plow Used in Huginlin Place Demonstration to Turn Fifty Acres of Sod.

A good many Janesville people this morning got their first sight of the Townsend farm tractor engine, the first of its kind in the city.

The tractor was being driven to the farm of Chester Miller, a farmer living about three miles north of Evansville, near Cookstown. Miller has purchased the engine and plow.

The tractor was exhibited at the Corn Exchange this morning for about an hour. A large crowd gathered to see the new machine.

The Purity of "Bull" Durham Is Proven Absolutely by Government Statistics!

Herewith we print a facsimile of a letter from Hon. W. H. Osborn, Commissioner of Internal Revenue, written in the routine of his official duty in answer to a letter from the manufacturer.

The Government officials find in the "Bull" Durham factory nothing but the bright, golden leaves of Carolina and Virginia tobaccos—the tobaccos that have made American cigarettes the most popular smokes in the world.

In Durham—and indeed, throughout practically all of North Carolina and the adjoining counties of Virginia—nearly every man is interested in tobacco, the great staple crop of the community. In the towns where the tobacco warehouses are located; on the farms, in the banks, in the stores—everywhere—these men who grow the tobacco, who take it to market, who buy it and sell it, and are made prosperous by the business of handling the money received from the crop—everywhere, these men know that the sweetest, mellowest, choicest leaf is bought for

GENUINE "BULL" DURHAM SMOKING TOBACCO

And they know that nothing else ever enters the "Bull" Durham factory.

These men who live with tobacco, know that for three generations the same farms in the same counties have been producing their best for "Bull" Durham. They know that the quality of "Bull" Durham has made the city of Durham famous—and the honor of "Bull" Durham is a source of pride, not only to the manufacturers, but to the entire community.

Test "Bull" Durham Purity For Yourself! You can easily prove to your entire satisfaction the absolute purity of this famous old tobacco.

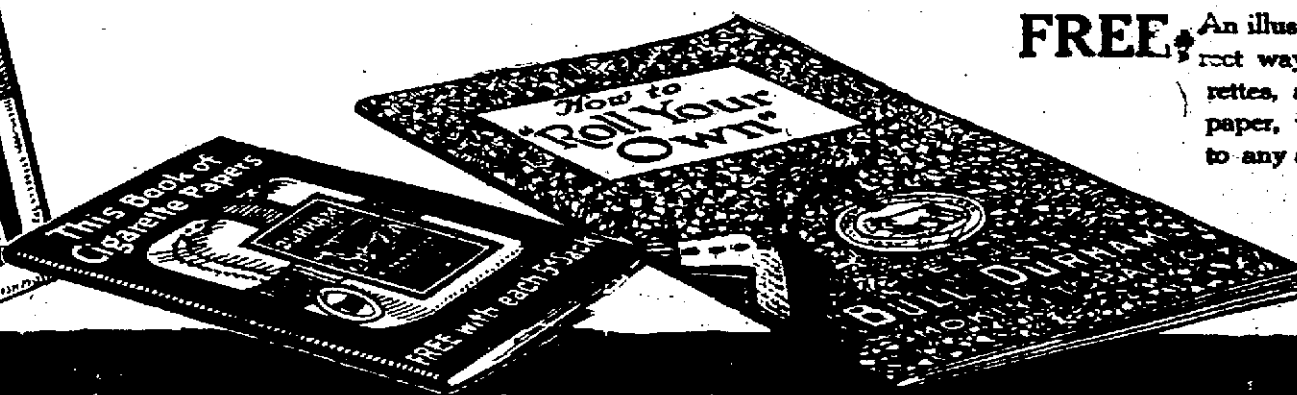

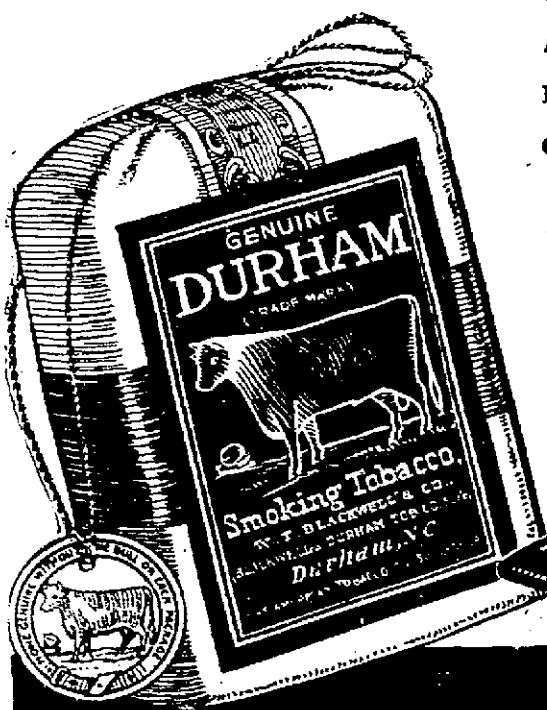

Simply take a bag of "Bull" Durham and empty the tobacco on a piece of white paper. Then separate the grains with your finger and examine them closely. You will find only tiny flakes of pure tobacco—nothing else looks like the golden Carolina-Virginia leaf used in "Bull" Durham. Your eye would instantly "spot" anything of a different nature. Make the test today— learn to "roll your own" with "Bull" Durham—and you'll find the greatest smoke-enjoyment of your life.

DECIDE TOMORROW.

Tomorrow is the date set for the decision as to who the conservative republicans of the state will endorse for nomination for the position of United States senator.

It is hoped the convention of a hundred and ten will make a wise selection. Will lay aside any personal feelings in the matter and will choose a man who will carry the fight to the bitter end.

The press, not only of Wisconsin, but of the country as a whole, is interested in the outcome of Wednesday's gathering. The vote of the presidential primary showed that the ultra progressive wave had evidently reached its height and was receding.

In fact the strong showing of the three La Follette delegates at large and the three district progressive delegates in the city of Milwaukee demonstrated that their election had been brought about by a coalition with the socialist leaders in return for aid given in the selection of a socialist mayor.

Wisconsin should have an able representative at Washington. It should have in the upper house of congress a man who represents the best interests of Wisconsin voters. It should have a man who will stay in Washington and attend to the business he was elected to attend to and not parade the county speaking at chauntiquas or tour his own state denouncing the present republican state government for selfish interests.

The republicans who meet tomorrow to make the selection of a man behind whom the republicans of the state have their work all cut out for them and they will doubtless make a wise selection based upon all conditions and not biased by personal or factional feelings. The outcome will be watched with interest.

A SCAPEGOAT.

That Josephus Daniels, secretary of the navy, is not primarily to blame for the sagging of navy affairs and for most of the egregious blunders he apparently has made is the charge made by Henry Reuterdahl, the greatest expert on the American navy.

Reuterdahl charges that many have long suspected, that Woodrow Wilson is responsible for most of the Daniels "breaks," and that Daniels is just the type of little man who Mr. Wilson likes to have in his cabinet. He possesses neither dignity nor character and is so delighted at simply being in the cabinet that he cheerfully does whatever the president tells him to do, denied facts with alacrity, accepts the blame complacently and does not even demur when, as happens from time to time, the president turns on him and kicks him. Aside from the fact that no man knows the inner workings of the navy so well as Mr. Reuterdahl, further credit is given to his charges by the fact that Mr. Wilson quarreled with Secretary Garrison, who was a radically different type, a real man, and forced him out of the cabinet, while he hangs on to Daniels despite the wealth of criticism which his retention entails; by the fact that the president adopted a course which forced John Bassett Moore, the ablest diplomat in the democratic party, out of the state department; that he quarreled even with Mr. Bryan when Mr. Bryan refused to admit the infidelity of his chief and to accept, without protest, the criticism which followed the carrying out of the president's orders; and by the further fact that Mr. Bryan's successor as secretary of state, is little more than a puppet, doing only what Mr. Wilson tells him to do and subordinating every conviction of his own to the president's wishes.

Mr. Wilson's entire cabinet bears witness to the fact that no man with backbone or character of his own can serve under Woodrow Wilson.

THE FLY NUISANCE.

In Janesville public sentiment has made excellent progress in regard to the fly pest. Many of us can remember from our childhood how indifferent people were to this plague. They accepted it as one of the trifling annoyances of life, to be ignored by all sensible people. To fret because of the attacks of insects was regarded as a sign of childishness and lack of self-control.

It was more customary in those days to build stables quite near houses. In many places the fashion prevailed of attaching them directly to dwellings, sometimes connected with a woodshed or carriage house. No good reason appeared for this proximity, except possibly that on a stormy day the owner could go out to his beasts without getting wet, a very poor excuse for a thoroughly undesirable arrangement.

The result was that perfect swarms of flies, attracted by animal refuse, would swarm in such places and plague a whole neighborhood. People would stand the nuisance all day. Perhaps at night to get a little relief, they would organize fly driving campaigns, and pursue the little vermin with feather dusters, brooms, and newspapers. After about an hour the flies would be as thick as ever, having crawled out from their places of refuge. It would be a disgusting sight today to see them feeding on our food at table as they used to do so freely.

A well screened house is accepted now as one of the essentials of comfort. Summer hotels and boarding houses that don't provide this essential must not expect to see many guests return for a second vacation.

As long as flies were regarded as a mere annoyance, it was well enough to maintain spartan indifference. Now that everyone knows that they are a principal carrier of disease, it is another matter. Property-owners should have a care how they build stables near dwellings, and should reduce the fly breeding conditions as low as possible.

While flies are rotting on the ground where they are produced, prices are advancing all over the country. Meanwhile millions are being spent to educate fruit producers, but nothing to educate distributors.

Some of the people who probably thought Richard Harding Davis lowered himself when he became a newspaper reporter, are no doubt still adding up columns of figures in an office.

OPEN INITIAL TRIAL OVER TEXAS MURDER

George Tier Goes Before Galveston Court for Slaying Anti-Catholic

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Galveston, Texas, April 24.—The trial of George Tier, opening here April 24, is the first of the so-called Father Black trials, in which three residents of Marshall, Tex., are accused of the murder of the anti-Catholic lecturer. The cases removed to Galveston on December 13, 1915, on a change of venue from Marshall, where the indictments were returned. Cases alleging complicity against Harry Winn and Frank O'Leary have been dismissed because of lack of evidence.

Tier was indicted for complicity in the killing of William Black, who claimed to have been formerly a priest, on the night of February 3, 1915. The night before he was killed, Black had delivered a lecture in Marshall entitled, "Romanism, a Menace to Civilization." He was to lecture again that night. Marshall had been stirred by the lecture of the previous night and by hand bill advertising Black's work against the Roman Catholic Church. He was advertised as "one who knows" and the hand bills referred to Roman Catholic institutions as "The Beast." They also contained charges, cartoons and alleged oaths of the Knights of Columbus.

About supper time, Black went to his hotel room, where he was joined by the other members of his party, Clarence F. Hall of St. Paul, Minn., and Miss Sadie Black, a young woman whom Black had adopted at her home in Arkansas a few days previously. Three Marshall men, John Rogers, John Copeland and Geo. Ryan called on the Black party.

Tier, defendant in today's trial, according to testimony at the examining trial, was present at the shooting but did not accompany the trio who first went to Black's room. It was declared he followed shortly after, and remained near the door during the fracas.

According to testimony, all three callers were members of the Knights of Columbus. They asked Black not to deliver his second lecture. Black replied he would deliver it. Black and Rogers snuffed. Black was shot near the heart, according to testimony by one of Rogers' companions. Hall of the Black party opened fire with a pistol, killing Rogers and shooting Copeland three times. Several persons who rushed through the hotel towards Black's room, Frank O'Leary, a city fireman, claimed that he started from the fire engine house nearby at the sound of the shooting and ran to the hotel, not knowing what was happening.

Indictments charging murder were returned against John Copeland, Geo. Ryan, George Tier, Harry Winn and Frank O'Leary. Testimony at the hearings did not develop the circumstances of the alleged connection of Winn and O'Leary with the killing and they were dismissed. Clarence F. Hall of the Black party, appeared before the grand jury but was not indicted.

Advantage With Jeffris.

Of the other candidates, all lawyers, the general opinion is that the contest has narrowed to a selection between Mr. Jeffris and Mr. Whitehead with the former holding the advantage. Mr. Jeffris seems to be favored because of his reputation for aggressiveness and it is understood that should he be nominated he will at once begin a speaking campaign in opposition to Senator La Follette. Among the committeemen it is known that there is some opposition to Mr. Jeffris but at the same time it is generally agreed that when the committee meets and after it has discussed the situation there is to be harmonious action unless some discordant factor now unknown appears.

A plan was proposed some time ago to postpone selection of a senatorial candidate until after another state convention is held to name candidates for state offices. This seems, however, to have fallen down because it indicated a hesitancy that would be taken as a confession of weakness on the part of the conservatives.

Has Faith In Remedy

Mrs. H. S. Carlson of Wakefield, Nebr., testifies to the relief she experienced from the use of Fruitola and Traxo:

"I used Fruitola and Traxo—with very good results, having passed almost a cupful of gall-stones with the first bottle. My skin is clear now, and I have a good appetite. I have lots of faith in Fruitola and Traxo."

Fruitola is a powerful lubricant for the intestinal organs, softening the hardened particles that cause so much suffering and expelling the congested waste in an easy, natural manner. A single dose is usually sufficient to clearly indicate its efficacy. Traxo is a splendid tonic, alterative that acts on the liver and kidney, stimulates the flow of gastric juices to aid digestion and removes bile from the general circulation.

ARE READY TO NAME SENATE CANDIDATE

Committee of 110 Badger Conservatives Will Meet in Madison on Wednesday—Jeffris is a Favorite.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

Madison, April 24.—Wednesday the political begins to boil again when the committee of 110 authorized by the conservative wing of the republican party, meets here to nominate a candidate for United States senator or to take other action should the committee so decide.

A long list of prospective candidates has been discussed during the past month, including John M. Whitehead of Janesville, M. G. Jeffris of Janesville, S. A. Cook of Neenah, George H. Hudnall of Superior, Emil Baensch of Manitowish, George Hixon of La Crosse and Walter Alexander of Wausau.

Business Man Wanted.

The names of Hixon and Alexander have been conjured with as desirable because of their ability to qualify in the "business men's" class, and there is little doubt that had either been responded warmly to the call extended one or the other now would have a following sufficient to bring about a harmonious agreement in the nomination. Mr. Alexander is particularly favored in the lakeshore region and Fox river valley and really his candidacy would win wide approval throughout the state. But he has been in California and no encouraging word could be secured from him. Mr. Hixon's frame of mind has not inclined to an ambition to get into politics and so the advocates of the "business men's" proposition seem to have become discouraged.

Advantage With Jeffris.

Of the other candidates, all lawyers, the general opinion is that the contest has narrowed to a selection between Mr. Jeffris and Mr. Whitehead with the former holding the advantage. Mr. Jeffris seems to be favored because of his reputation for aggressiveness and it is understood that should he be nominated he will at once begin a speaking campaign in opposition to Senator La Follette. Among the committeemen it is known that there is some opposition to Mr. Jeffris but at the same time it is generally agreed that when the committee meets and after it has discussed the situation there is to be harmonious action unless some discordant factor now unknown appears.

A plan was proposed some time ago to postpone selection of a senatorial candidate until after another state convention is held to name candidates for state offices. This seems, however, to have fallen down because it indicated a hesitancy that would be taken as a confession of weakness on the part of the conservatives.

Has Faith In Remedy

Mrs. H. S. Carlson of Wakefield, Nebr., testifies to the relief she experienced from the use of Fruitola and Traxo:

"I used Fruitola and Traxo—with very good results, having passed almost a cupful of gall-stones with the first bottle. My skin is clear now, and I have a good appetite. I have lots of faith in Fruitola and Traxo."

Fruitola is a powerful lubricant for the intestinal organs, softening the hardened particles that cause so much suffering and expelling the congested waste in an easy, natural manner. A single dose is usually sufficient to clearly indicate its efficacy. Traxo is a splendid tonic, alterative that acts on the liver and kidney, stimulates the flow of gastric juices to aid digestion and removes bile from the general circulation.

For the convenience of the public, arrangements have been made to supply Fruitola and Traxo through representative druggists. In Janesville they can be obtained at J. P. Baker, 123 W. Milw. St.

The motor horn and the taxi whistle have banished the rather surprising reputation for quiet which London held among many foreign visitors a decade or two ago. In 1896, again, the London of the early nineteenth century was described in John Ashton's "When William IV. was King" as "a very noisy city"—evidently in contrast with the comparative silence of his own time.

But the noises he conjured up from the past—the watchman's call, the shrieks of the milkwoman, the chimney sweep, the newsboy and the vendors of fish and cat's meat, the bells of the mufin man and the footman—were as nothing to the piercing mechanical noises of today.—London Opinion.

These grand country manors, castles and mansions on immense reserves of idle land has been famous for centuries as deer parks, shooting preserves, lands of the fox hunt, golf and fishing. Today they are a drug on the market.

The current issue of a well known British real estate magazine today carries nineteen solid pages of closely printed advertisements asking purchasers or tenants for more than 50,000 acres of sporting estates and innumerable country seats throughout England, Scotland and Wales.

Real estate experts with an eye on the future declare the large estates will in most cases fall of sale or lease; that they must be split into smaller tracts and sold for agricultural purposes. The fox hunt and the grouse moor will never again be so popular as they were before the war, say the experts.

Here is a sample ad of the properties now on the market:

"Historic manor house in the Western Highlands. Thirty bed and dressing rooms, several reception rooms. Delightful matured old grounds. Ten thousand acres of shooting. For sale or moderate rental."

The ad continues to explain that one season's shooting on the game preserves has been 7,000 pheasants, 500 partridges, 150 hares, 1600 rabbits and many woodcock, duck and snipe.

Any person in America who has garnered wealth making munitions, or otherwise, could lease a real estate on a long time contract at very moderate terms.

This castle, it said, declares, is charmingly located on a pretty Loch and is surrounded by a vast sporting estate of 14,000 acres, 11,000 of which consists of one of the best grouse moors in Scotland. The best single bag of grouse thus far has been 750. Delightful golf links, excellent salmon fishing and golf links.

The ad makes no mention of agriculture.

With hundreds of thousands of men released from the army after demobilization, Britain must find a place for them. Those who have lived in the open air will not return to desks in stuffy offices and indoor civilian occupations of the past. They will insist on continued open air, according to those who are now making a study of the situation.

What were grouse moors and hunting estates of the pre-war period most probably sold for the agricultural homes in the post-war era of thousands of the men who have carried the guns.

THE GIRL AND THE GAME...

Copyright 1915 by Frank H. Spearman.

"He ought to," returned Rhineland, evenly.

"Why so?"

"Because he is the same man."

The car drew up before the house and stopped. "What are you going to do?" asked Helen in an undertone, "make a call here?"

"Yes," answered Rhineland, preparing to get out while a footman, running down the steps, opened the tonneau door for him. "And," he added, "I want you to come in with me."

Helen's brow furrowed a little in perplexity. "But I don't know these people," she murmured under her breath.

Rhineland standing on the ground while the footman waited at the other side of the open tonneau door for Helen, held out his hand: "You'll find you're mistaken," he said to Helen convincingly. "You know almost everyone here. And even from those you don't know, I can promise you a genuine welcome."

"Uncle Amos," demanded Helen, hurrying with him up the flight of steps that led to the familiar vestibule, and toward which Rhineland seemed hastening with unusual energy, "what do you mean?"

"I'll tell you what, Helen, the moment you cross the threshold."

Her maid was at her elbow and in the excitement of the little French woman, in her sparkling eyes and compressed lips—Helen read more of the great secret. She drew a deep breath and standing in the big hall, looked around: "Why," she faltered, "everything seems just as I left it. Am I dreaming?" She drew her hand faintly across her eyes. "What does this mean? These furnishings—everything! Uncle Amos," she cried under her breath, "who lives here? What is it? What has happened?"

"Helen," he took her two hands into his own, "this is now your home just as it used to be. And your old friends are nearly all here to greet you."

A group of servants, men and women, stood at the entrance to the dining room. They were familiar faces to the agitated girl.

Tears welled into her burning eyes as she looked into the faces smiling around her.

"Annette," said Rhineland briskly to the maid, "Miss Holmes wishes to go to her room."

Like one dazed, Helen turned toward the foot of the stairs but she did not go up. Instead, she ran impulsively to Rhineland, threw her arms about his neck and kissed him. The two stood for a moment in silence, neither of them equal to speaking, then Helen turned to Annette who waited and Rhineland, blowing his nose vigorously, walked out into the garden.

Some hours later he and Helen were on the lawn when Spike came hurrying up the drive carrying in his arms two little dogs. "They're for you," he muttered gruffly to Helen when she asked about them. "I knew what Mr. Rhineland was doing all this time," he said, relaxing into a grin, "and I couldn't keep up with his pace in making presents, but I wanted to bring you something."

"Why, these little dears are a royal gift," insisted Helen. "Spike, you ought never to have done such a thing. They're beauties!"

"Oh, no," demurred Spike.

"But they are," declared Rhineland, "Where did you get them, Spike?"

Spike made light of the matter. "They didn't cost much," he said modestly. "I traded an old kit of burglar tools for the pair of them. I thought," he added simply, "I might never need the tools again—they were mostly old models—and you might need the dogs. That's no joke," he insisted, when he saw how Helen and Rhineland were laughing. "These dogs are better than all kinds of burglar alarms. And," he nodded slightly toward Rhineland, "as I've been given the job of watchman on these grounds, I'm thinking about myself, too. They'd be a big help to me as well as a guard for Miss Helen."

Everything that day seemed to come just right. While the three were together a messenger boy appeared with a telegram for Helen. She opened it and read:

Miss Helen Holmes,

Signal.

Will be on Local today.

GEORGE STORM.

Helen's face reflected the pleasure the news gave her; she handed the dispatch to Spike and asked him to meet Storm at the station.

When Spike had gone, Rhineland, who had been telling Helen of his plans for the future, resumed his subject. "And Helen," he said, at length, "I'm going to make a request of you now that may seem very peculiar. You know, as well as I do, how my nephew, Earl Seagrue, has treated both you and me. He has been about as mean as a man could be, in spite of our efforts to treat him fair. But the fight is over and we have won. He is my only sister's child. She died when he was a mere boy and asked me, on her death bed, to look after Earl and be to him what she would have been, had she lived. You know whether I've tried to carry out her injunction; you know what it has cost me in more ways than one; you know as well as anyone that I have been patient with him."

AT MYERS THEATRE.

That Chaplin Question. Outside of the European war and whether or not T. R. will run for president, Charlie Chaplin and his doings probably are the topic of conversation of more people than any other single subject in the world. The announcement that a big movie corporation would pay him $670,000 for one year's work caused a rash of astonishment and disbelief all over the civilized world. Today he is reliably reported to be in several widely separated parts of the country; tomorrow you will hear that he is fighting in France; next week you will read that he is dead, that he is in an insane asylum, that he has just got married, that someone has stolen his just famous bag, and so on, and on, and on. In this connection the forthcoming engagement of "The Charlie Chaplin Revue" is interesting in that the featured performer is a man who, called as Charlie Chaplin, has caused the movie fans in Chicago, New York, Boston, Philadelphia and other cities to argue heatedly that he is none other than Charlie Chaplin himself. It is said that his every move and gesture are unmistakably those of the famous comedian, and that it would obviously be impossible for any man to matter how clever, to successfully imitate the well-known eccentricities of the man who has made so many millions hold their sides in laughter. Around this accomplished actor, whoever he may be, the management has built up what it claims to be the strongest vaudeville road show at present on tour. It is desired to impress upon the public that this is not a moving picture, but an honest-to-goodness real live human being, whose soul ambition is to entertain and amuse.

The Charlie Chaplin Revue will be the attraction at Myers theatre Thursday, Friday and Saturday (matinee on Saturday), April 27-28-29.

Like a breath of air from a rose-scented garden is "Peg o' My Heart," Oliver Morosco's production of J. Hartley Manners' comedy, which he announces as the farewell tour under his management. It is a story of love and wholesome fun and through it all is a delightful strain of Irish-American humor and a touch of pathos, both of which make it one of the most attractive stage story theatregoers have been offered in many years.

Mr. Morosco is sending Florence Martin in the title role to the Myers theatre Sunday, April 30, evening only. Miss Martin is said to be a wonderfully artistic "Peg," having played eight consecutive months in Boston and four months in Philadelphia in this delightful comedy. She was selected for the title role of "Peg" by Mr. Morosco himself, who considers her the premier of all "Pegs." What makes it all the more pleasing is the fact that the producer has supplied a company which is his personal selection to make the farewell tour of "Peg," a remarkable one.

"Peg o' My Heart" is a story of a young Irish-American girl who is sent to wealthy relatives in England to be educated and polished. She has inherited part of the wealth of an old uncle, and despite the fact that her mother was frowned on by her family for marrying the happy-go-lucky Irishman whom she loved, Peg is taken into the stiff English household, principally because her being there means money to her relatives. She has little to amuse or comfort her but she does find a solution for her problem of loneliness. "Peg o' My Heart" is in three acts and each act is a delight in itself. There isn't another play like it in the world.

The cast includes Fred Allen, Madeline L'Estrange, Yorkie Brock, Edmund Dalby and Lillian Kemble Cooper.

AT THE APOLLO.

"The Rosary" Tonight. The Apollo theatre will offer tonight the seven-reel play, "The Rosary," under the auspices of St. Patrick's church, as one of the big features of the year. ### AT THE APOLLO.

"He Fell in Love With His Wife." Ostrom threatens to kill Holcroft unless Alida will run away with him. Knowing that Ostrom will keep him at the spot where the road runs along the cliff, he departs. Alida goes to make ready. Leaving a note to Holcroft to mislead him, she goes upstairs. The little servant girl believing Alida gone, runs to tell Holcroft. Holcroft arriving in haste finds the note and at last realizes that he loves his housekeeper wife that he married from the poor house. As he sobs, crushed over her letter, Alida appears on the stairway. She longs to go to him and tell all but knows that Ostrom will kill Holcroft unless she keeps her trust. How Holcroft, believing her gone, pursues and thrashes Ostrom; how Ostrom fires from the ground as Alida runs in and of the results of that shot are told in an immensely dramatic manner. "He Fell in Love With His Wife," coming to the Apollo theatre on the Paramount program tomorrow.

"The Trail of the Lonesome Pine," the Lasky picture shown at the Apollo yesterday, is a photoplay mighty well cast, mighty well directed and mighty well photographed. Charlotte Walker is seen in the role of June, with very appealing emotional

The producers did not consider it necessary to film the entire book, as it seemed more important to show how June won her sweetheart than to go into detail in regard to her later schooling.

In this picture are coherent, thrilling situations, set into richly atmospheric woods and mountains to make a story to hold and charm. Along with the big things of the situations are a multitude of little things of characterization that make a good picture for discriminating spectators.

Theodore Roberts, who always seems to improve with each new role, is here supreme as the stern, bristly chinned always makes a good hero and Earle Fox creates a clever role as the loving, loyal servant of June.

ENCAMPMENTS ARRANGED FOR BOY FARMERS WHO COMPETE IN FAIR CONTEST

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE) Madison, April 24.—State fair officials have made arrangements to accommodate in encampments on the state fair grounds all boys and girls outside of Milwaukee who will compete in the Boys and Girls' Agricultural clubs' department during the 1916 state fair, Sept. 11 to 15.

There will be a separate camp for boys under the supervision of the Y. M. C. A., and a separate camp for girls under supervision of the Y. W. C. A.

Plans for these encampments are being made, and it is expected that boys will be furnished at cost, between thirty and forty cents a day, and sleeping accommodations free of charge, in tents.

During the hours the boys and girls are not engaged in work of their department they will be taken in squads to visit other departments, and outdoor and other amusements will be provided for their entertainment.

All rules laid down by the Y. M. C. A. and Y. W. C. A. must be strictly obeyed. These rules will have the approval of state fair officials.

The official physician will be in charge of sanitation of both encampments, and proper care will be taken in the selection and preparation of foods.

The encampments are to be provided for the reason that many boys and girls who compete will not be accompanied by parents or guardians. The state fair officials desire that they be surrounded by proper conditions during the time they are carrying out the work and competitions of their departments. Parents may rest assured that their sons and daughters will be properly cared for during their stay on the fair grounds.

It is too early to estimate the number of boys and girls who will compete, but it is expected that there will be nearly 1,000 boys and perhaps 200 or more girls.

Prof. Thomas L. Bewick of the University of Wisconsin is superintendent of this department, and he is assisted by fifty well known educators of Wisconsin.

STARVES ON GOOD FOOD: VAGRANT WAS ACCUSTOMED TO GARBAGE CAN DIET.

Milwaukee, April 25.—Starving because he was given wholesome food and disheartened because he was in a place of cleanliness Ferdinand Nurnburg, 42, a cave man arrested for vagrancy last Thursday died today at the house of correction where he had been sentenced for a ninety day term.

The man's stomach according to attendants at the house of correction, could not digest the food given him. Nurnburg declared that he could not eat a roll with butter on it and because he could not retain the food provided, a modified form of starvation set in which caused his death.

Nurnburg had relied for sustenance on morsels he gathered at garbage disposal plant.

BIG CROWD ENJOYS CY. DE VRY'S TALK ON ANIMALS AT ZOO

Head of Lincoln Park Zoological Garden Gives Illustrated Lecture Under Auspices of Fellowship Club.

Cyrus De Vry, specialist on the care and treatment of wild animals in captivity, took the audience which filled the Apollo theatre to capacity last evening, on a delightful trip through Lincoln Park zoological gardens, of which he is the head. He exhibited a large number of colored stereoscopic slides and 3,000 feet of motion pictures of the animals at Lincoln park and in his address gave many intimate side-lights on the mammoth task which is undertaken in the care and upkeep of such a zoological park. Mr. De Vry came to Janesville under the auspices of the Janesville Good Fellowship club, whose guest he was at dinner at the Grand Hotel. The audience at the Apollo theatre, where Mr. De Vry gave his lecture, was there by special invitation of the Good Fellowship club and included students at the high school, teachers of the local schools and many of the grade school pupils, as well as many others.

The food bill for the animals at Lincoln park amounts to $30,000 a year, said Mr. De Vry. Without doubt there are more articles of food on the menu for the zoo each day than at any of the Chicago hotels or restaurants. We have eighty-four different kinds of food to supply the appetites of some 3,000 birds, beasts and reptiles. Mr. De Vry gave a list of the amount of hay, grain, meat, fruit and vegetables that it took each week. For the carnivorous animals, he said, Sunday was fast day and they received no meat. Sunday is selected because there is a shortage of attendants on that day and since the park is a public institution, there is no necessity to make the feeding of the animals a special drawing attraction.

"It is not the wildest and most ferocious beasts of the zoo that are the most dangerous," said Mr. De Vry. "Rather the most treacherous are those that have been tamed. Animals which have been tamed and petted for years often are the ones which turn on their keepers in some unexplainable fit of anger."

"It is not the lion, but the royal Bengal tiger which is the monarch of beasts. He is ferocious and untamable. He is the most dangerous animal in the zoo. He is a docile animal," Mr. De Vry told of a pair of lions which had lived at the zoo for many years and to which he became very much attached. The male was killed by a lioness and the female, Nellie, and two more affectionate animals never lived. The female went blind in her old age and when she died Prince was so overcome with grief that he died afterward. Mr. De Vry selected a grassy knoll, on the prettiest spots in the park, for their graves. Often Mr. De Vry has had so many lion cubs at the park that he lacked quarters for them and he allowed them to play on the lawn with children who visited the zoo.

The most feared animals in the park are the elk because of their huge antlers, which grow to a length of five feet or more. They shed these antlers in February or March each year, and it takes fifteen or sixteen weeks to perfect a new growth.

Pictures of the vertebrae were most interesting and Mr. De Vry told of some of the problems of feeding them. Two specimens lately secured refused to eat and Mr. De Vry finally found a machine which was formerly used to jam food down their necks. Pictures showed this machine in action, ramming chopped meat into the huge snake, which he held firmly by a dozen men to keep it from coiling. Other pictures showed the extraction of the poison fangs, the huge snake being held straight by a corps of men while the operation was being performed.

The animal houses at Lincoln park are the finest of their kind. The large animal house, in fact, took the third gold medal for excellence from an architectural standpoint of any buildings erected in Chicago for a period of eighteen years.

The motion pictures gave opportunity for a close study of the various animals and were thoroughly enjoyed, especially by the youngsters, for whom the whole entertainment was a special treat.

Mr. De Vry told a number of interesting animal stories during the dinner hour at the Grand Hotel. The Good Fellowship club held a short business meeting following the repeat, at which Victor P. Richardson was elected president, Fred S. Sheldon, secretary and P. J. Mount treasurer. Two new members were admitted to the club.

AT BEVERLY THEATRE.

Famous Cast Supports Billie Burke in "Peggy."

Adding much to the attractiveness of "Peggy," the opening play at the Beverly tonight, is the excellent supporting cast accorded to Billie Burke. Remembered for his striking characterization in "The Miracle Man," Thompson brings out artistically the hard, narrow spirit of the man, in the beginning, and the gradual softening of his nature under the influence of the girl, Thomas H. Ince, director-general of the Ince studio, played with Billie Burke.

Thompson seven years ago in "The Father and the Son."

William Desmond is cast as the young Scottish ravisher who wins Peggy's heart. At first he is shocked by her masculine garb and boyish pranks, but capitulates to her lovable qualities. Learning From Tumbles.

It does not matter how many tumbles you have in this life so long as you do not get dirty when you tumble. There is the greatest practical benefit in making a few failures in life. You learn that which is of inestimable importance—that there are a great many people in the world who are just as clever as you are, * * * and you very soon find out, if you have not found it out before, that patience and tenacity of purpose are worth more than twice their weight in cleverness.—Huxley.

BARN SWALLOW

(Hirundo erythrogastra)

Length, about seven inches. Distinguished among our swallows by deeply forked tail.

Range: Breeds throughout the United States (except the South Atlantic and Gulf states) and most of Canada; winters in South America.

Habits and economic status: This is one of the most familiar birds of the farm and one of the greatest insect destroyers. From daylight to dark on tireless wings it seeks its prey, and the insects destroyed are countless. Its favorite nesting site is a barn rafter, upon which it sticks its mud basket. Most modern barns are so tightly constructed that swallows cannot gain entrance, and in New England and some other parts of the country barn swallows are much less numerous than formerly. Farmers can easily provide for the entrance and exit of the birds and so add materially to their numbers. It may be well to add that the parasites that sometimes infest the nests of swallows are not the ones the careful housewife dreads, and no fear need be felt of the infestation spreading to the houses. Insects taken on the wing constitute the almost exclusive diet of the barn swallow. More than one-third of the whole consists of flies, including unfortunately some useful parasitic species. Beetles stand next in order and consist of a few weevils and many of the small dung beetles of the May beetle family that swarm over the pastures in the late afternoon. Ants amount to more than one-fifth of the whole food, while wasps and bees are well represented.

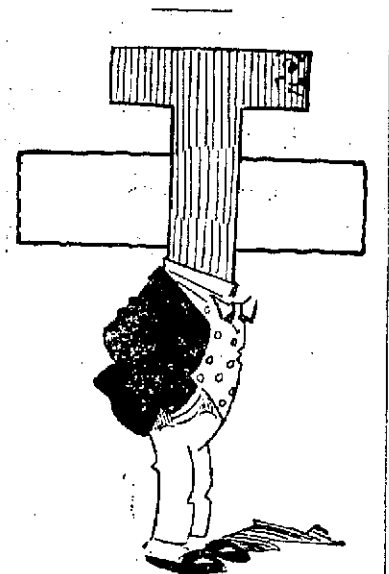

AT BEVERLY THEATRE.

"The Cave Man" on Thursday.

Of the many scenes that make backgrounds for "The Cave Man," perhaps the most interesting are those taken in the steel works at South Bethlehem, Pennsylvania, that furnish the setting for the climax of the story. While the action of "The Cave Man" requires this setting, additional scenes, that show the employees at work and the process of manufacture from the time the white hot stream of molten metal pours from the melting pot until it emerges from the various processes to become a sheet of the steel that furnishes the armor plate for huge battleships, adds exceptionally to the value of the picture.

The title role in "The Cave Man" is one of Mr. Edeson's favorite parts and one in which he started successfully, both on Broadway and on tour. It was written by Belet Burgess and picturized for the screen by Marguerite Bertsch. It lends itself admirably to the exigencies of photoplay construction, and is a story of contrast with its main theme the metamorphosis of a man, a member of that class that has its being on New York's east side, from a brawny coal heaver to a polished member of society. During the process of transformation Mr. Edeson is given opportunity to bring into play that degree of talent that stamped him a successful actor on the legitimate stage.

At the outset of the story the hand of Madge Boynton, the daughter of a wealthy general on the retired list, is being sought by rival suitors. One of them, Dan Hiver, is a poor and struggling inventor; the other, Arthur Crowe, a wealthy young man about town. It needs no special gift of divinity to guess which of the aspirants won out in the game of love. In all well regulated stories, and so in "Dollars and the Woman," Madge bestows her heart and hand upon the poor inventor.

Fishing That Is Not Sport

One way of catching herring is by driving nails into a board so that they stick out several inches. The boards are then dragged through the shoals, and the fish catch between the nails and are pulled by the board into the boats. In one year more than a million pounds of herring were caught at Prince Rupert and frozen by the cold storage plants to be sold for bait. Something like 125,000 pounds of codfish are annually taken for the same purpose.—Christian Herald.

CHAPTER XV Quicksands

A short week after the reclamation service headquarters had been moved from the log-built offices on the government reservation to the commodious and airy suite on the sixth floor of the Niquioa building Brouillard received the summons which he had been expecting ever since the night of rioting and lawlessness which had marked the close of the railroad celebration.

"Mr. Cortwright would like to see you in his rooms at the Metropole," was the message the office boy brought, and Brouillard closed his desk with a snap and followed the boy to Bongras'. The shrewd-eyed tyrant of Mirapolis was in his shirt sleeves, busily dictating to two stenographers alternately, when the engineer entered the third room of the series; but the work was suspended and the stenographers were sent away as soon as Brouillard was announced.

"Well," was the millionaire's greeting, "you waited to be sent for, didn't you?"

"Why not?" said Brouillard shortly. "I have my work to do and you have yours."

"And the two jobs are at opposite ends of the string, you'd say. Never mind; we can't afford to throw each other down, and just now you can tell me a few things that I want to know. How is young Massingale getting along?"

"As well as could be expected. Caruthers—the doctor—says he is out of danger."

"H'm. It has been handed in to me two or three times lately that the old man is out gunning for Van Bruce or for me. Any truth in that?"

"I think not. Massingale is a Kentuckian, and I fancy he is quite capable of potting either one or both of you for the attack on his son. But so far he has done nothing—has hardly left Steve's bedside."

"Mr. J. Wesley Cortwright flung himself back in his luxurious swing chair and clasped his pudgy hands over the top of his head where the reddish-gray hair was thinning reluctantly.

"I've been putting it off to see which way the cat was going to jump," he admitted. "If young Massingale is out of danger, it is time to get action. What was the quarrel about, between him and Van Bruce?"

"It occurs to me that your son would be a better source of information," said Brouillard, evading.

"Van Bruce has told me all he remembers—which isn't much, owing to his own beastly condition at the time. He says young Massingale was threatening something—something in connection with the Coronida grant—and that he got the insane idea into his head that the only way to stop the threat was by killing Massingale."

"The sandy-gray eyes of the millionaire promoter were shifting while he spoke, but Brouillard fixed and held them before he said: "Why should Massingale threaten your son, Mr. Cortwright?"

"I don't know," denied the promoter, and he said it without flinching a hair's breadth.

"Then I can tell you," was the equally steady rejoinder. "Some time ago you lent David Massingale, through the bank, a pretty large sum of money for development expenses on the 'Little Susan,' taking a mortgage on everything in sight to cover the loan. But when the railroad was an assured fact he learned that the Red Butte smelter wouldn't take his ore, giving some technical reason which he knew to be a mere excuse."

Mr. Cortwright nodded. "So far you might be reading it out of a book."

"In consequence, David Massingale finds himself in a fair way to become a broken man by the simplest of commercial processes. The bank holds his notes, which will presently have to be paid. If he can't pay, the bank comes back on you as his indorser, and you fall back on your mortgage and take the mine. Isn't that about the size of it?"

"It is exactly the size of it. I do want the 'Little Susan' and I've got a good friend or two in the Red Butte smelters who will help me get it."

Brouillard's black eyes were snapping, but his voice was quite steady when he said: "Thank you. That brings us down to the mention of the Coronida grant and Stephen Massingale's threat—which your son can't remember."

"Right-o," said Mr. Cortwright, still with predetermined geniality. "What was the threat?"

"I don't know, but the guessing list is open to everybody. There was once a grant of many square miles of mountain and desert somewhere in this region made to one Don Estacado de Montarriba Coronida. Like those of most of the great Spanish land grants, the boundaries of this one were loosely described and—"

Mr. Cortwright held up a fat hand. "I know what you're going to say. But we went into all that at Washington before we ever invested a single dollar in this valley. As you may or may not know, the reclamation service bureau tried to choke us off. But when it came down to brass tacks, they lacked a witness. We may be in the bed of your proposed lake, but we're safely on Coronida land."

"So you say," said Brouillard quietly, "and on the strength of that you have been guaranteeing titles. Just there is where Massingale comes in, I imagine. He has spent twenty years or more in this region, and he knows every landmark in it. What if he should be able to put a lighted match to your pile of kindling, Mr. Cortwright?"

The promoter pulled himself erect with a grip on either arm of the chair. "Brouillard, do you know what you are talking about?" he demanded.

"No; it is only a guess. But as matters stand—with your son indictable for an attempted murder—if I were you, Mr. Cortwright, I believe I'd give David Massingale a chance to pay those notes at the bank."

"And let him blackmail me? Not in a month of Sundays, Brouillard! Let him sell his ore and pay the notes if he can. If he can't, I'll take the mine."

"All right," said the visitor placably. "You asked, and I've answered. Now let's come to something more vital to both of us. There is a pretty persistent rumor on the street that you and your associates succeeded in getting a resolution through both houses of congress at the last session, appointing a committee to investigate this Coronida claim right here on the ground. Nobody seems to have any definite details, and it possibly hasn't occurred to anyone that congress hasn't been in session since Mirapolis was born. But that doesn't matter. The committee is coming; you have engaged rooms for it here in Bongras'. You are expecting the private-car special next week."

"Well?" said the magnate. "You're a pretty good kind of partner. But what of it?"

"Oh, nothing. Only I think you might have taken me in on the little side play. What if I had gone about town contradicting the rumor?"

"Why should you? It's true. The congressional party will be here next week, and nobody has made any secret of it."

"Oh, nothing. Only I think you might have taken me in on the little side play. What if I had gone about town contradicting the rumor?"

"Why should you? It's true. The congressional party will be here next week, and nobody has made any secret of it."

"Still, I might have been taken in," persisted Brouillard suavely. "You'll surely want to give me my instructions a little beforehand, won't you? Just think how easily things might get tankied. Suppose I should say to somebody—to Garner, for example—that the town was hugely mistaken; that no congressional committee had ever been appointed; that these gentlemen who are about to visit us are mere complaisant friends of yours, coming as your guests, on a junketing trip at your expense. Wouldn't that be rather awkward?"

The mayor of Mirapolis brought his hands together, fist in palm, and for a ditting instant the young engineer saw in the face of the father the same expression that he had seen in the face of the son when Van Bruce Cortwright was struggling for a second chance to kill a man.

"Damn you!" said the magnate savagely; "you always know too much! You're bargaining with me!"

"Well, you have bargained with me, first, last and all the time," was the cool retort. "On each occasion I have had my price, and you have paid it. Now you are going to pay it again. Shall I go over to the Spotlight office and tell Harlan what I know?"

"You can't bluff me that way, Brouillard, and you ought to sense it by this time. Do you suppose I don't know how you are fixed?—that you've got money—money that you need to say you owed somebody else—tied up in Mirapolis investments?"

Brouillard rose and buttoned his coat.

"There is one weak link in your chain, Mr. Cortwright," he said evenly; "you don't know men. Put on your coat and come over to Harlan's office with me. It will take just about two minutes to satisfy you that I'm not bluffing."

For a moment it appeared that the offer was to be accepted. But when he had one arm in a coat sleeve, Brouillard's antagonist in the game of hardihood changed his tactics.

"Forget it," he growled morosely. "What do you want this time?"

"I want you to send a wire to Red Butte telling the smelter people that you will be glad to have them handle the 'Little Susan' ore."

"And if I do?"

"If you do, two things otherwise due to happen adversely will go over to your side of the market. I'll agree to keep out of the way of the sham Washington delegation, and I think I can promise that Harlan won't make a scarehead of the facts concerning the Coronida land titles."

Mr. Cortwright thrust the other arm into the remaining coat sleeve and scowled. But the rebound to the norm of brusque good nature came almost immediately.

"You are improving wonderfully, Brouillard, and that's no joke. I have a large respect for a man who can outbid me in my own corner. You ought to be in business—and you will be, some time. I'll send the wire, but I warn you in advance that I can't make the smelter people take Massingale's ore if they don't want to. All I can do is to give the old man a free field."

"That is all he will ask—all I'll ask, except one small personal favor: Don't rub your masquerading Washington delegation into me too hard. A fine quality of noninterference is about all you are buying from me."

"Tell me one thing, Brouillard: What is your stake in the Massingale game? Are you a silent partner in the 'Little Susan'?"

"No."

"Then why are you so anxious to make old David a rich man at my expense? Are you going to marry the girl?"

The engineer did not resent the question as he would have resented it a few weeks earlier. Instead he smiled and said: "A little while ago, Mr. Cortwright, I told you that you didn't know men; now I'd add that you don't know women."

"CHAPTER XVI Flood Tide"

Public opinion, skillfully formed up on models fashioned in Mayor Cortwright's municipal laboratory, dealt handsomely with the little group of widely-heralded visitors—the "congressional committee." When it was whispered about, some days before the allspice, straw, that the visiting lawmakers wished for no public demonstration of welcome, it was resolved, both in the city council and in the Commercial club, that the wish should be rigidly respected.

Hence, after the farewell banquet at the Commercial club, at which even the toasts had ignored the official mission of Mayor Cortwright's guests, tinging curiosity still restrained itself, said nothing and did nothing until the train had stormed out on the beginning of its steep climb to War Arrow pass. Then the barriers went down. In less than half an hour after the departure of the visitors, the Spotlight office was besieged by eager tip hunters, and the Metropole cafe and lobby were thronged and buzzing like the compartments of an anxious beehive.

Harlan stood the pressure at the newspaper office as long as he could. Then he slipped out the back way. There was a light in Brouillard's office on the sixth floor of the Niquioa building, and thither he went, hoping against hope, for latterly the chief of the reclamation service had been more than usually reticent.

"What do you know, Brouillard?" was the form his demand took. "Go to Cortwright," suggested the engineer. "He's your man."

"Just come from him, and I couldn't see much more than David Massingale did. Then: 'No shipments means no money for you, and more delay; and delay happens to be the one thing you can't stand. When do those notes of yours fall due?'"

Massingale was troubled, and his fine old face showed it plainly. "I ain't much of a man to holler when I've set the woods afire myself," he answered slowly. "But I don't know why I shouldn't yip a little to you if I feel like it. Today is the last day on my notes. I been to see Harldwick at the bank, and he gave me the ultimatum good and cold."

OWES WELL BEING TO HER FRIENDS

Racine Woman Tells Remarkable Story of Change Which Has Come Over Her.

Friends play a large part in the lives of all of us. But no one has cause to be more thankful to friends than Mrs. M. Gallatin, of 1506 Buchanan street, Racine. It was due to friendly advice that she is today enjoying such good health. This is what Mrs. Gallatin said recently:

"After suffering for many years, I have just recently regained my health in a most remarkable manner. I was troubled with stomach disorders and could seem to get no better no matter what I did. I suffered from constipation, sickness in the morning, loss of appetite, indigestion, and pains in the back and side. I was nervous and restless and lost much sleep. I often experienced a bad taste in my mouth. I had a headache most of the time."

"Not long ago several of my friends advised me to use this new medicine TANLAC which was being introduced in the city. They told me that they had tried it and knew that it was good. I got a bottle, and was perfectly delighted to see an improvement in my condition almost from the first dose. I now feel better than I have for years. I eat anything I want without being distressed. I sleep soundly and altogether am feeling stronger and better in every way. I can't endorse TANLAC too strongly."

TANLAC may be obtained here at Smith's Drug Store.

Alkali Makes Soap Bad For Washing Hair

Most soaps and prepared shampoos contain too much alkali, which is very injurious, as it dries the scalp and makes the hair brittle.

The best thing to use is just plain mulled coconut oil, for this is pure and entirely greaseless. It's very cheap, and beats the most expensive soaps or anything else all to pieces. You can get this at any drug store, and a few ounces will last the whole family for months.

Simply moisten the hair with water and rub it in, about a teaspoonful is all that is required. It makes an abundance of rich, creamy lather, cleanses thoroughly, and rinses out easily. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and is soft, fresh looking, bright, fluffy, wavy and easy to handle. Besides, it loosens and takes out every particle of dust, dirt and dandruff.

Quick results—that's everybody's experience with want ads.

How a Piano Manufacturer Views Newspaper Advertising

By S. J. Turner, Advertising Manager George P. Bent Co.

The advantages to be derived through national advertising in the newspapers are briefly, as follows:—

To the Advertiser

1. Concentration.
2. Elimination of waste circulation.
3. Flexibility—
  - (a) A community, section or state can be worked separately and thoroughly. This enables advertiser with limited capital to begin in small way and grow.
  - (b) Makes it possible to take advantage of good conditions in certain sections and to save waste circulation in territory in which conditions are poor.
4. Secures co-operation of newspapers which are a power in local community.
5. Lower selling cost per sale (with us) altho cost per thousand circulation is higher. Sales count.
6. Makes it possible to run over dealer's name, thus showing where goods may be purchased.
7. Furnishes a powerful argument in establishing agencies, especially if the dealer's name is to be inserted.

To the Merchant

1. Receives greater circulation in his territory, which means more sales and a lower selling cost; in fact, greater value all around.
2. Insertion of dealer's name and address gives a valuable local publicity not possible in national medium.

Heart and Home PROBLEMS

—By—
MRS. ELIZABETH THOMPSON
Letters may be addressed to
MRS. THOMPSON
In care of the Gazette.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I am a young man, twenty-five years old and have been engaged to a girl twenty-one years old for almost a year. I am able financially to support a wife. (1) Do you think we are too young to get married?

(2) I have not yet given her an engagement ring. What kind should I get and what should I get her? (3) She lives about 100 miles from me. Should I wait until I can go to see her, or should I wait two months, hence, or send her the ring?

(4) She is an orphan girl and had to go to college. I want to let her finish her course, but she will not consent to it. At her present position and salary she cannot herself save enough to put herself through college. I don't want her to have to work as she now does. Should I insist on her accepting the money to finish her education, or should we get married at once? I think she would marry me any time but my folks are all well educated and want her to be equal to them in this respect.

(1) No. (2) A diamond is better than any other stone for an engagement ring. A good stone would cost between one hundred and one hundred and fifty dollars. Of course you could very easily pay more.

(3) I should think she would rather wait until you can be there to give it to her.

(4) You cannot insist upon her accepting the money. She realizes that it does not belong to her. She is for your wife, and she is right. Just because your people had a few more years of college than she has had is no reason why she is better educated, and she should not be made to feel so. Unless college graduates mention the fact that they are graduated.

Harry's Wife

"Bertha, I wish you would be a little more careful of other people's feelings. Do try and remember that you are living in another person's home and she might prefer to manage her own home."

Harry Polson had decided to have a pitched battle. "I think that it would have been better to have waited till we were prepared to go to housekeeping by ourselves," mumbled Harry.

"That is kind of you to say you regret your marriage, and sure, I have not complained at having no home of my own and having to live all mixed in with your folks, and it is not gentlemanly for you to complain over things that you suggested."

Bertha looked indignantly at her husband. "It was a mistake, but I thought mother was so easy to get along with that there could not possibly be any trouble," continued Harry.

"Your mother is all right. I have nothing to complain of as far as she is concerned, but your father is so opinionated, so determined to have his own way."

"Why should he not have his own way in his own house?" interrupted Harry.

"So set in their ways as they grow old. Usually if there are young people around they are not quite so obstinate as he is."

Harry groaned as he thought what his wife would be when she was old if nothing changed her, and what could change her. He realized that he was perfectly helpless to keep her from doing the least thing that she had determined to do. They would have to go to housekeeping in the fall; he foresaw that, but how was it to be done with no money and Bertha's lofty ideas of what was fitting.

CAPS ARE REPLACING HATS AMONG PEOPLE OF VIENNA

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE)
Vienna, April 25.—Caps are fast replacing hats in Vienna. As is known to all observing travelers, Vienna, alone among the great cities of Europe, has hitherto been conspicuous from the fact that all its men and boys insisted on wearing hats, disdaining the cheap and comfortable cap that is popular among the working classes in London, Berlin and Paris. Austria has always possessed a large hat industry and hats were almost as cheap as caps here, but the war has caused a shortage of wool and the felt hats have doubled in price. The result is an increasing number of converts to the cap.

UNIQUE CLUB PARTY HELD MONDAY EVENING WITH LARGE ATTENDANCE

The spring dancing season opened at Assembly hall last evening with the seventeenth annual party of the Unique club, one of the most successful affairs ever given by this organization. Two hundred couples were in attendance. The hall was prettily decorated in pink and white, heavy and long streamers of the latter color forming a great canopy bedecked profusely with pink roses, under which the merry throng held sway until one o'clock. A program of mixed dances, the old waltz and the two-step, interspersed with the later steps, made the evening a source of enjoyment both to the older and younger couples who were in attendance. Hatch's orchestra furnished the music.

EFFICIENCY AND HUMANTY

A very ambitious, conscientious young girl who lives in our neighborhood works as a stenographer in the city.

A few weeks ago I was calling on her mother, and she mentioned that Ellen was home in bed. When I expressed my sympathy, she said, "Oh, she's not really sick. She just felt as if a cold were coming on."

Nothing more was said at the time, and I wondered what had come over Ellen. For she isn't the kind who stays home for a slight cold. In fact, the winter before she almost had pneumonia because she persisted in going to the office in spite of a very bad cold. She told me all about the new state of affairs.

For the Slightest Cold.

At the beginning of the present winter her employer had summoned the office force to a conference and surprised them by telling them that they were to stay home whenever they felt the slightest symptoms of a cold.

Then he had a serious talk with them. The substance of the talk was this:

"If you go to bed when you feel a cold coming on, take some simple treatment, keep warm, and rest, you have nine chances out of ten of breaking it up in a day or two. Of course hitherto you haven't felt like staying home just because you were afraid a cold was coming on. Now you have come to work and the cold has grown worse and lasted perhaps a week, perhaps longer. Maybe you end you were sick and had to stay out of work. Maybe you managed to stick to your post, but felt so mean that it was a big strain to work. Probably you gave the cold through the experiences."

HERPES, FEVER-BLISTER, OR COLD SORE

Herpes, or cold sore, occurs upon the lower part of the face, about the mouth and nostrils. The patient first feels a stinging, burning sensation, or itching. At the same time a group of little pin-head sized blisters form. These are filled with clear yellow fluid, and are surrounded by a reddened area of skin or mucous membrane. Herpes may come upon the lips, or upon the eyeballs. There may be one patch or several, and sometimes a large area of skin is covered with herpetic eruption. After a few days the little blisters dry up into a crust which soon falls off and leaves a red spot that disappears after several days.

Upon the lips or eyeballs, when mucous membrane is involved, the crust is apt to leave a superficial ulcer which is very painful and irritable. Sometimes the patient and his friends have asked me to tell what is the cause of herpes, and in our skillful way we have evaded the issue by springing out medical terms to cover our stupor. The medical authorities, who generally serve us in good stead, when we are thus plumped down, have nothing to offer in the way of causes of herpes, so we shall have to give our own little theoretical conception and let it go at that.

Herpes or "cold sore" or "fever blister" is the one word which speaks of a reflex signal thrown up by the system to indicate, dumbly, that something has gone wrong inside. Herpes on the face is almost a classical symptom of pneumonia. Herpes on the cheek recurs again and again in certain children whenever a tooth becomes carious, and only careful attention by the dentist will clear up the frequent and annoying attacks of herpes.

Herpes on the lip is a common incident of an acute coryza or tracheitis.

Some people have an attack of herpes whenever they indulge in over-eating.

A good many women have about thirteen attacks of herpes annually. The treatment is simple. The lesion will clear up rapidly if left to itself. A small spot on the skin may be protected with collodion, or painted with compound tincture of benzoin, or gently smeared with zinc oxide ointment. Touching herpes on the lip frequently with spirits of camphor dries it up.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

Please give me some suggestions regarding the cause and relief of canker sores in the mouth. I suffer again from this trouble, and I meet many others similarly afflicted, but no one appears to have anything to offer.

Answer—Faulty oral hygiene is the first factor—decayed teeth, chronic inflammation or infection of gums, diseased tonsils, perhaps in some cases too prolonged use of antiseptic dentifrices, too vigorous brushing, tobacco, toxemia from intestinal stasis is another factor. Another thing you are constipated or not. Touch the canker sore once each day with tincture of iodine diluted with an equal volume of alcohol.

Second Operator for Goitre. I have had exophthalmic goitre seven years. Two years ago half the gland was removed, but it only made me more nervous. I am also badly constipated. Doctor now advises another operation. Should I have it? Is it a sure cure?

Politely Managed. "I met a footpad the other night." "Did he demand your money or your life?" "He wasn't that crude. He said he regretted that it would be necessary to put me to pecuniary inconvenience and possibly subject me to physical peril and that the exigencies of the moment were such that the laws customarily relied on for protection would have to be suspended. So I handed him my watch and pocketbook."—Washington Star.

ALFALFA CAMPAIGN INTERESTS FARMERS THROUGHOUT COUNTY

Big Demonstration in May and Farmers Are to Turn Out for Two Days' Auto Tour.—Crop Investigation.

Rock county is going in for alfalfa. Indications to date, since the alfalfa campaign was started with the organization of the Rock County Farm Improvement association at Beloit a short while ago, are that this unit of the Wisconsin farming district is not to continue to be backward as formerly in the growing of this particular forage crop.

Much interest has been found among the farmers of the county by J. E. Stallard, Jr., field worker for the county farm advancement organization, that he has deemed it advisable to hold a two day alfalfa demonstration instead of the single day feature as originally planned. Mr. Stallard is working in connection with the Wisconsin Alfalfa Order and since the campaign was opened has daily found interest among farmers of the county.

It was announced on Tuesday of last week that the demonstration would be held on May 28, but this date may not be the one as originally planned. A committee consisting of L. F. Graeber, secretary of the Alfalfa Order, has informed Mr. Stallard that while the demonstration will be late in May, a definite date can be set at the present time.

The farmers interested are to be taken about the county in automobiles. Mr. Stallard has located a number of good fields of alfalfa for the demonstration and this ground condition that we are carrying on the campaign to educate the farmer in growing alfalfa. Mr. Stallard said this morning, "Under the right system and care there is absolutely no reason why we cannot successfully grow alfalfa."

The itinerary for the farmer automobilists has not been arranged yet, but it was thought this morning that the first day would be spent in the northern section of the county and the second in the southern section. Of particular interest will be the farm of W. J. Dougan. While Mr. Dougan has successfully grown alfalfa and his field will be an object of illustration and explanation, his modern up to date farm will appeal particularly to the farmers. There are many in the county who have heard and read much of Mr. Dougan and of his work as the efficient farmer, but who have never had the opportunity of visiting his place. This will be their opportunity.

The Janesville Commercial club and the Beloit Business Men's association are co-operating with the County Farm Improvement association and have promised to furnish as many automobiles as the farmers are interested enough to fill them.

While the latter part of May is recognized as a poor time for the farmer to be absent from his work, nevertheless assurances are being made on all sides that the loss of time from regular farm work will be more than evened up by going on the automobile trip to the alfalfa demonstration.

DUTCH FAMILIES LEAVE GERMANY AS SHORTAGE CRIPPLES INDUSTRIES.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

The Hague, Netherlands, April 25.—The exodus from Germany of the numerous Dutch workmen's families resident there has been in evidence for many months past, and the movement is proceeding steadily. Most of these people hail from the Rhinish Westphalian industrial region.

They declare unemployment is increasing on every hand in various branches of German industry. Margarine and oil factories are here and there entirely at a standstill; the weaving factories have not been at work for some time and now the army gun-cotton factories, including those at Bocholt, have had to reduce their operations to two days per week, the cause in all cases being lack of raw materials.

HAMMER OUTPOINTS

WELSH BY RUSHING

Chicago Fighter Gives Champion Neat Drubbing in Every Round At Milwaukee—Bouts At Beloit.

Freddie Welsh took another whipping and in fact, a real drubbing for the neat sum of $1,500 last night in Milwaukee when Ever Hammer, Chicago's latest candidate for the honors, appeared. Welsh hot-footed it around the ring during the ten rounds of mulling before the plunging, tearing, savage rushes of the blistering blonde tiger from the Windy City. Hammer won every round and all during the bout, punched Freddie until he looked like the champion and Welsh a second rat.

Plunging after the Briton in the first round, Hammer had the champion covering, ducking and stepping away in his masterfully way. It was like a scared rabbit getting away from a built dog in the fourth round it looked for a moment as if Hammer was going to do the impossible and put Welsh away. He rushed him to the ropes in a head down lunge and sent across two wicked punches that staggered Welsh. The champion ducked however, and escaped the savage lunge.

On Thursday night Janesville boxing fans have opportunity of seeing Bob Moba the Milwaukee "cave-man" meet Tony Caponi for ten rounds. If Moba is in condition the bout should be an exciting tilt, for Moba is one of the hardest fighters in the ring today. In no sense of the word is he a boxer, but every inch of him is a fighter. Ted Russell, who is making a name for himself in Beloit bouts, will have his

WHITE SOX HAVE CANNED

THREE PITCHERS SO FAR

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.] Chicago, April 25.—Since the Chicago White Sox returned from their training trip, they have released three pitchers. Manager Rowland's veterans showed such good form in the early games, that two of the recruits came through with colors flying, that he decided that he would have to give some of his youngsters a chance of scenery. He released Horace Eiler, to the Moline club, whence he came and Malcolm Galvin, of the University of Wisconsin, and Ray Clarke, an Ohio player, were released to Hamilton, Mo. club. All players were released with "string attached to them."

In an exciting game played between the All Stars, captained by Gilbert Junger, with "Capt." Gordon Alter pitch and Leland Pratt catch, and the regular fifth grade team of the Jefferson school, captained by Arlan Cookson, the All Stars were victors by a score of 27 to 12. For the fifth grade George Gray, who caught three hard flies, and Erwin Larke, who caught one liner bare handed, played the best game.

DR. WITHINGTON TAKES CHARGE OF COACHING AT BADGER SPRING PRACTICE

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.] Madison, Wis., April 25.—Moleskin for certainly flew at Camp Randall Monday afternoon, when Dr. Paul Withington, the new University of Wisconsin football coach, took charge of his spring candidates.

Line scrimmaging, blocking, and general chalk talks were all given part of the coach's time and he got some real pep out of the squad. One of the best coaching staffs that ever came out of the varsity workouts appeared on the field on Monday. Withington was the central figure, and he wasted no time in preliminaries, but got the men down to business immediately, teaching the linemen in particular as he had been taught by the incomparable Haughton of Harvard.

Bill Juneau and Keg Driver, coaches of last year's eleven, were both on the job. Juneau was handling part of the backfield candidates, and Driver the other. Driver has been demonstrating his loyalty to Wisconsin by consistent work with the team, and although he has not received a salary appointment as a coach for next fall. Besides last year's staff, with the exception of Tom Wilson, line coach, the two new assistants were also on work. John Doherty, a Harvard quarterback, who came with Dr. Withington, spent most of the afternoon teaching the quarterback candidates how to receive from the center and Chuck Buck, captain of last year's eleven, was working the linemen, who were not under the personal direction of Dr. Withington, at bucking.

BALL ROOM BECOMES A GENUINE PRIZE RING

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.] St. Louis, April 25.—Something new in society was staged at a fashionable inn here recently when wealthy St. Louisians at a "stag" affair turned the ball room into a boxing ring.

Four round regular milling were followed by a "battle royal" reversing the regular order of things. Each of the black battlers had his second's name, that of some society man, printed across his chest, and back in bold white enamel letters. The white seconds swung towels and fanned their entries assiduously, but the betting is said to have been light.

WILLOWDALE SHUTS OUT THE HARMONY NINE SUNDAY

Willowdale won its first game Sunday by defeating the strong Harmony nine by the score of 11 to 0. Eastman the pitcher for the winners, secured fifteen strike outs and allowed but one hit. Willowdale is one of the strongest teams in this section in the county. Try and games may be booked with Arthur Bowels, Route 15, R. C. phone. The battery for Willowdale was Eastman and Utzig; for Harmony, Wright and Waldman.

MORRIS MILLER

Captain Harvey E. Cunningham, who was the backer of the Norfolk team in the Virginia league when Chris Mathewson was sold to the New York Giants for $2,000 in 1900, died the other day in Norfolk. This revives the story of how the New York club tried to evade payment and how Cunningham had to go to court to get his money. Cunningham was 53 years of age and a very rich man.

Roger Bresnahan, poohbah of the Toledo team, has let it be known that no "hand-shaking" goes for his players. They are expected to stick out their jaws and their chests, as Roger, every time they meet a player on the rival teams and fight like Germans in the trenches. Any player caught saying "Hiowareyou?" to a member of another association team will draw a fine from Roger.

John McCloskey seems to be serious about going through with the Rio Grande league, despite the troubles on the Mexican border. He announced that six clubs have been lined up and managers selected. Howland and Murphy will be the principal team and William (Kid) Nance will have Albuquerque. The league, says McCloskey, will be made up of El Paso, Trinidad, Colorado Springs, Pueblo, Albuquerque, and Roswell.

Baseball leagues in the west will read with interest the howls in the Eastern league over "mileage." Under the merger plan some of the teams have to travel as much as a hundred miles or so. Out west a ball team will make a 400-mile jump and think it easy. The greatest mileage in the Eastern league is that provided for New London, which has 3,300. The lowest is for Portland, which has 3,404. Out on the Pacific Coast one jump would eat up half of that.

The Northwestern league has a rule this year that no players shall be taken on under optional agreements. Portland planned to send out a number of its youngsters with strings to them in the Northwestern league, but because of the rule was compelled to let them go outright. Other Coast league clubs are balking on releasing players to the Northwestern unless they can be recalled. The national commission, by the way, has held that a rule against optional players is contrary to baseball policy.

Claude Cooper, an outfielder with the New York Giants, became anxious about his contract with the Brooklyn Reds and journeyed to Brooklyn to find out. He has made a contract still running for $7,000 a year—one of those ironclad kind. The former backers of the Brooklyn outlaws told him they could do nothing for him, in spite of all promises made. Yet these same Brooklyn Reds are going to collect $400,000 from organized ball as a bonus for going out of business. What will the national commission do about that?

Lee Fohl of Cleveland says he has the greatest team of discards ever put together, not excepting the Boston Braves of 1914. With a few exceptions every man of the Indian team has at one time or another worn the uniform of another major league team and been released for one reason or another, though it is hardly proper to call players like Speaker, Roth, Daly and Gandil "discards."

If Chick Watson, the Trinity university star signed by Detroit and turned over to Houston for development, keeps up his tick he will give the Tigers some of that much needed pitching one of these days. Jennings was attracted to him when he struck out 26 men in a ten-inning college game in Texas. In his first professional game—for Houston against Beaumont—he allowed but one hit. He is a left-hander. What might bother the ordinary fan is, why did Jennings send him to Houston, when he needs pitching right on his own team?

George Stallings resents the idea that his outfield is not of championship caliber. He says it has been many years since Boston fans have seen such a trio out outer gardeners as he can present and he mentions Whitcomb particularly as one who will star. Stallings says the boss of the Braves, will play better ball this year than he ever did before and he also expects much of Compton.

"Glad to see you like it yourself—It's far better and more palatable than a lot of those nasty tonics you sometimes prescribe. You'd starve to death if people were all as happy and healthy as I am. BLATZ Beer keeps me healthy and well."

The Best Beer Brewed?

Prof. Charles Frederick Chandler, Professor of Chemistry at Columbia University, New York, says:

"Beer is food—is not intoxicating in ordinary quantities and beer is one of the foods that is free from bacteria. It is appetizing and aids digestion. If the prohibitionists drive beer from the household they will deprive a large part of the population of a wholesome article of food."

OHIO'S "PREPAREDNESS" RESTS ON PRIMARIES OUTCOME

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE)

Columbus, O., April 25.—Ohio's "preparedness" for the national political conventions next June will rest in the outcome of the primaries today. Delegates and alternates were being chosen by party voters and the presidential preference of Ohio's voting populace will be indicated.

The democrats are practically agreed upon U. S. Senator Alcee Fomere, former governors Judson Harmon, James E. Campbell and James M. Cox to represent them at the state and national convention, while the republicans, it is predicted, will choose Governor Frank B. Willis, U. S. Senator Warren G. Harding, William C. Proctor of Cincinnati, and John J. Sullivan of Cleveland.

Republicans are pledged solidly for Theodore E. Burton of Cleveland, and democrats are affixing the name of Woodrow Wilson to their ballots.

AKRON TO ARREST MEN

TO GIVE THEM A PLACE

TO SLEEP IN AKRON, OHIO.

Akron, O., April 25.—Because of the influx of workers attracted by good wages in the rubber factories that are crowded with orders, Akron is in the midst of a house famine. Many families are living in tents until new houses can be put up.

Patronman Pat McGuire has his own way of meeting the situation. He explained in police court that the reason he arrested six men on charges of vagrancy was to get them a place to sleep. All were newcomers and had jobs but couldn't find rooms.

Miss Florence Jack next favored the ladies with a selection on the flute.

Next Professor F. O. Holt discussed the "Open Door to the Orient," setting forth our trade relations with the Oriental powers. STATE WIDE PRESIDENTIAL PRIMARY IN MASSACHUSETTS.

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE)

Boston, April 25.—Roosevelt or not Roosevelt is the big question being decided at the Massachusetts state wide presidential primary today.

Republican, Democrat and Prohibition voters are selecting delegates-at-large, district delegates and their alternates today, but only in the Republican ranks is any kind of a fight expected.

There, the "Big Four," Governor Weeks and ex-Senator Crane of the unpledged forces, are lined up against the Roosevelt slate, former Lieutenant Governor Cushing, Charles S. Bird, Congressman A. P. Gardner, and State Senator Robert M. Washburn.

It was generally expected that nothing short of a sweeping wave of popular sentiment for Roosevelt could prevent the unpledged forces, which have the assistance of practically all of the Republican city and town committees, from electing their delegates in a majority of the congressional districts. They are expected to carry from ten to thirteen district. Roosevelt leaders generally conceded today the election of Governor McCall and Senator Lodge, but hope to elect Cushing and Bird. Cushing they regard as their best vote-getter; and they would hair his election as a Roosevelt victory.

The Massachusetts Democrats will send to their National convention two delegates for each congressional district, and four delegates at large, all pledged to the renomination of President Wilson. The unopposed Democratic candidates for delegates at large are ex-Governor Walsh, Humphrey O'Sullivan, Joseph O'Neil and Charles B. Strecker.

The Prohibitionists will send unopposed delegates to their national convention. They will elect a slate of eight delegates at large, unopposed, headed by William Shaw, candidate for Governor last year.

No Pure Water. Owing to the extremely solvent powers, pure water is never found in nature, the nearest approach being found in rainwater, which, as it is formed in the upper regions of the atmosphere, is the purest that nature supplies, but in descending it brings with it whatever impurities are floating near the surface, which in the neighborhood of cities are always numerous; hence perfectly pure water is hardly to be found, even the artificially distilled being only approximately so.

Nearer to Port. Are you richer today than you were yesterday? No? Then you are a little poorer. Are you better today than you were yesterday? No? Then you are a little worse. Are you nearer to your port today than you were yesterday? Yes; you must be a little nearer to some port or other, for since your ship was first launched upon the sea of life you have never been still for a single moment. The sea is too deep; you could not find anchorage if you would. There can be no pause until you come into port.—Henry van Dyke.
